Request & Response:

Request in bold:

I wish to know the history of the original cast iron pipe net work which was supplying tap water to properties in Hayle under the South West Water Authority:

Who originally built this pipe network?

For what purpose was it originally built?

Where/what is the source of the water which runs through those pipes?

How and where was this water treated for human consumption?

Is this pipe network now completely redundant under South West Water Company or do they continue to serve properties?

Do these pipes remain live under ground or has the water source to them now been turned off?
